

Awareness about Food Security and Sustainable Agriculture

Fall 2022

Department of Home Economics Students prepared various food items during the inauguration of Home Economics Labs to raise awareness about food security and sustainability, emphasizing long term wellbeing of individuals. . Students of Food and Nutrition prepared food products related to sustainability and highlighted recipes for various diseases to promote knowledge among all stake holders. A session was also conducted with stakeholders such as local farmers and food producers as well as students for sharing knowledge and skills regarding sustainable agriculture and food security.

